Event organisers see clear advantages as there is no need to rent receivers and headphones anymore, nor distribute them, collect them or replace lost or stolen ones.. Their phone becomes the receiver, and the app streams audio via Wi Fi straight out of the interpreters' booths.. Whilst smartphones are the most common example, employees also take their own tablets, laptops and USB drives into the workplace.. One of the things I learned quickly was the BYO formula Bring your wine to the restaurant, bring your chair to a neighbour's garden party... Today there are BYO phone plans and BYO cups for coffee shops and BYOD is the increasing trend towards employee- owned devices within a business, so we shouldn't be surprised that BYO has even found its way into the world of conference interpreting. For all of us, technology is driving the ways we communicate and conduct business, no matter what industry you are in.. Benefits include reduced costs and higher employee satisfaction, but security concerns and compliance issues are among the downsides.. Another upside are streaming services to the Net These allow for people to view/listen to an almost live webcast of an event and the interpretation (5- 1.. BYOD is part of the larger trend of IT consumerisation, in which consumer software and hardware are being brought into the enterprise.. "So what's new out there in the interpreting world? Here's a brief overview: What equipment is currently used for conference interpreting? When it comes to equipment, gold standard for conventional simultaneous interpreting is the use of soundproof booths, interpreter consoles and wireless receivers using digital infrared technology, as this is secure, interference- free and ensures superior sound quality.. Fi connection becomes slow A sound film is a motion picture with synchronized sound, or sound technologically coupled to image, as opposed to a silent film.. When I arrived on the shores of Sydney in 1 Down Under had a whole swag of surprises and cultural curiosities for me. e828bfe731
